

How to Prevent a Run or Tear in Tights from Spreading

This guide explains how to prevent a tear in nylon tights from spreading.

Written By: Audrey Fremier

INTRODUCTION

This guide explains how to quickly and simply reduce the spreading of a hole in nylon tights by applying nail polish. Nail polish is a quick drying substance. If administered to the edges of a run, it will harden the frayed edges and prevent the run from expanding further into the nylon.

TOOLS:

- Clear Nail Polish (1)
 - Utility Scissors (1)
-

Step 1 — Run or Tear in Tights

- Put the ripped tights on for easier repair, or leave them on if you're already wearing them.
- Gather clear nail polish and a pair of scissors.

Step 2

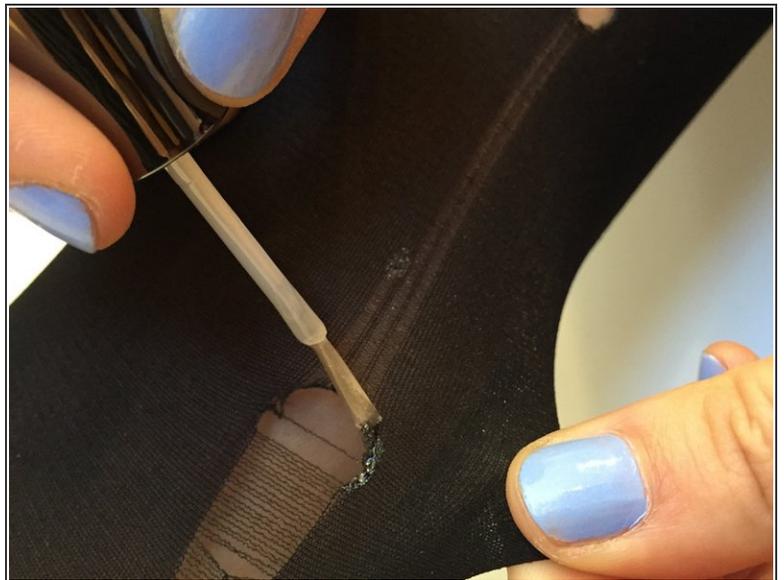

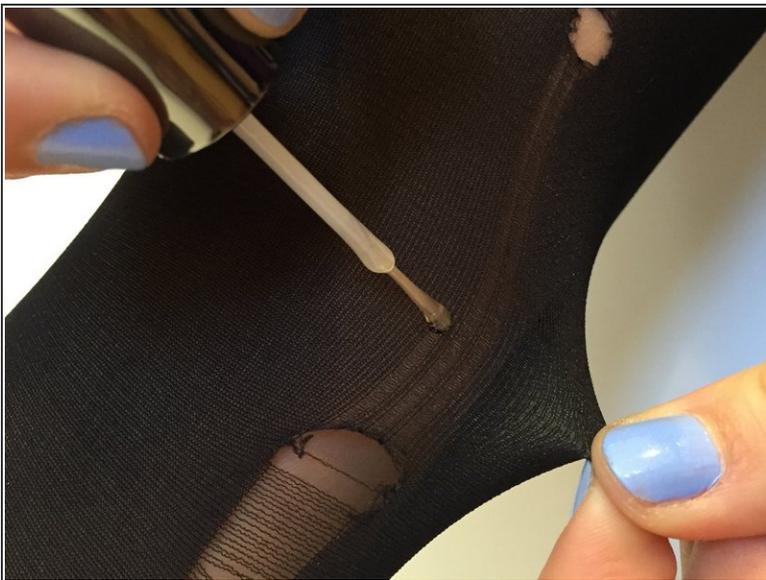

- Locate all potential runs or directions that the rip can expand.
- ⓘ Runs will not usually expand horizontally, but be sure to check both vertical ends of the run.

Step 3

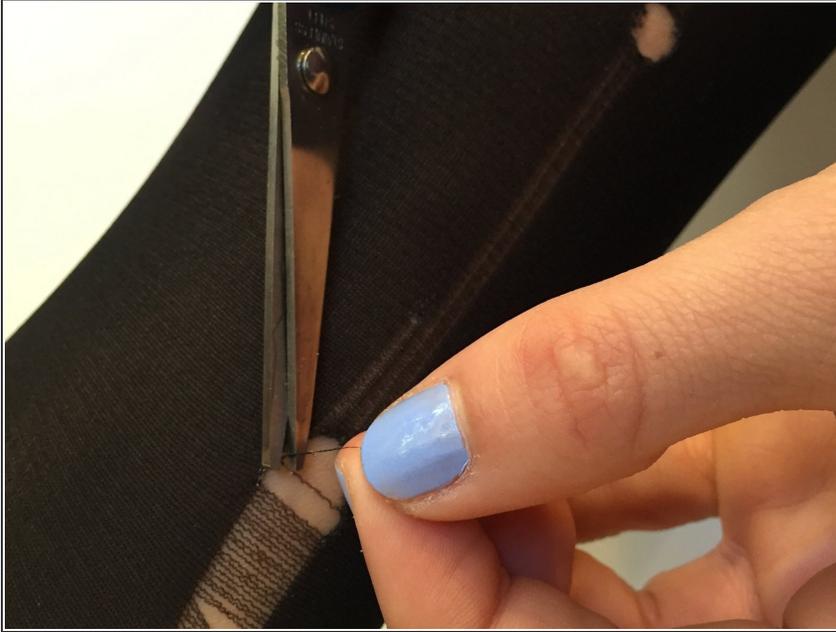

- Gently tug the tights away from your skin to prevent the nail polish from affixing to your body.

Step 4

- Brush a dollop of clear nail polish on all potential runs.
- ⓘ Small runs will require just a dab of nail polish while larger holes may require a thin coat.
- Repeat these steps to all potential runs and loose threads.

Step 5

- Once the nail polish has dried, you may cut any hanging pieces of thread.
- The nail polish will take about 1 minute to dry.

 Be sure to complete this step after applying the nail polish and letting it dry or a new run will form.

These steps can save a pair of tights from becoming too tattered for normal use.